"Dear Mike, We know you have opposed this in the past on certain technical grounds. We continue to believe there are overriding commonsense reasons for preventing a further accumulation of power and privilege among the large carriers. News coverage of the vital events of our time PROVE how deleterious concentrated ownership and control are to the proper functioning of our democracy, and the future here lies squarely with the internet highway. Do NOT please allow it to be turned into a limited-access toll road."

The facilities for the internet is easily multiplexed and massively multi-user friendly (professional opinion here) and needs no industrial interference to flourish. There should be no barriers, no fees, and no manipulation by commercial interests, and there should certainly be no exploitation. It is the legitimate business of government to provide this media, and it should be provided on a not-for-profit basis to everyone. I know my view isn't widely accepted in today's capitalistic system, but moving in the direction of AT&T is unthinkable, even for the most modest humanist. The only bravery on display is that of the dissidents against this lawless, authoritarian administration – but the bootlicking mainstream media is slandering such upstanding citizens as "unpatriotic". Practically the only places the intelligent voices of dissent are heard loud and clear are on the internet. And their foes in high places are afraid the jig's up, so they're using their clout to pull the plug and then attempting to legalize their fascistic machinations after the fact. "Media monopolies currently control nearly all communication access already and now they are secretly doing the same things behind the scenes via deciding which internet/email traffic they allow to flow and at what speed. These corporations are after complete power to control who is allowed to say what and to whom. If that "speech" does not please the corporation they have the power to impede it at will. They must be STOPPED from controlling our access to each other. Internet "neutrality" MUST BE PROTECTED."

"Tom, I hope you find preserving the freedom of the internet as important as I do. Big media should have no business, no right, to tell others what they can or can't say on the internet. It has always adhered to the idea of freedom of speech and it should remain that way. Please cosponsor HR 5353 and vote in favor if and when it comes to the floor of the House.
